

The image displays four identical blank templates for a 'Papelito' (Papel Picado) craft project, arranged in a 2x2 grid. Each template features a central pyramid of rectangular and circular cutouts, with a decorative banner at the top and a vertical column of smaller rectangular cutouts on the right side. The templates are designed for a craft project where the cutouts are used to create a decorative structure, likely a piñata or a similar festive decoration. The background of each template is a light gray grid, and the cutouts are outlined in black. The banner at the top of each template has the word 'OFRENDAS' written on it. The vertical column of cutouts on the right side of each template consists of five rectangular cutouts of varying sizes, arranged in a vertical line. The central pyramid of cutouts is composed of several rectangular cutouts of different sizes, with a row of five circular cutouts in the middle. The overall design is symmetrical and festive, typical of Mexican folk art.
